Today I tried something new, I used Monroe's Discovery Focus 10 tape, which unfortunately allowed me only a few minutes on target. Monroe used the rest of the time for energy conversion, resonant breathing and other stuff. So while I had an immensely enjoyable session I only got the following during my brief trip:

The target site is very high and has a strong sense of lots of verticalness. It is also quite long. The site has a strong feeling of naturalness to it. There is something there that looks like this:

This gave me a strong AOL of monastary and caverns.

The sky was very clear and blue and there was something at the site that glittered and shimmered with light. (AOL: crystal formation, and shimmery water).
